

Hi, my name is Ariyen. I am 20 years old. I am originally from Afghanistan but grew up in Oslo, Norway. I would like to consider the EU Business School in Munich, as it is something I find interesting. During my last year in high school, we had a career fair and one of the universities that was there was EU Business School, which caught my interest.

Each of us is influenced by people, events, and situations in our lives. For me one of the biggest influences has to have been moving from Afghanistan to Norway. This has given me a completely different life, education, and opportunities. It has also made me more grateful for the environment I have been able to grow up in.

Another important influence in my life is my gap year after high school. During this time I experienced how difficult it can be to find a job. Me and a friend applied online to many places but we got only rejections and very few responses. Because of this, we decided to change our approach and started going in person to different stores to ask directly for work. Even though we were rejected many times, this experience taught me to be more confident and not to give up easily.

But we also received some tips from people we met. One suggestion was to try and go ask schools because they often need substitute workers. We ended up asking schools and eventually got interviews. I got a job at an elementary school for Year 1 to Year 7 where I worked as a substitute teacher. I helped the kids in class, held activities, and assisted teachers. This job influenced me a lot by teaching me responsibility, communication, and of course patience.

High School experiences have also shaped me, especially working in groups. In a class I took during year 2 of high school "Entrepreneurship and Business Development" I learned how important structure and clear roles are when working in a team. Before this, our group struggled because we did not divide tasks properly but after assigning roles like marketing, accounting, and website work, everything became more organized. This taught me how teamwork and structure affect results.

A personal influence has also been my own challenges, such as procrastination. I sometimes struggle with staying consistent, especially with habits like going to the gym or finishing personal tasks. However, this has taught me that even small progress is better than doing nothing. Overall, these experiences have shaped who I am today by making me more responsible, more motivated, and not to give up.
